

Highway infrastructure is a serious job creation issue because logistics are crucial to the success of main plants and their suppliers, especially in the automotive sector. The present execution of Vision 21 is leaving some gaps in our highway system that need to be addressed if we are to garner the number of supplier jobs that are available to us.

In these economic times we must be able to respond quickly and effectively if we are to continue creating better, higher paying jobs, and that will require greater input from job creators in setting transportation priorities, more options for funding key transportation infrastructure and more creative thinking.
